YOUNGEST KING IN EUROPE TAKES OF GREECE

King Alexander Made Constitutional Monarch.

Athens, Sept. 21.-King Alexander was the center of a brilliant scene as the palace to the parliamentary chamber made his first appearance before parliament today, took the oath to chamber was garlanded with wreaths rule as a constitutional monarch, and delivered his first speech from the above the doorway indicated that even throne. He looked a boyish king, for in this abode of democracy there was shower of rain. This is no "yarn," good-looking and, in his uniform of fficer of the guards with the medis and ribbons of royalty, he had all the bearing and dignity of a monarch.

The event was notable in many respects. Neither this young man nor anyone else ever supposed he would be king, until a few weeks ago. He is a nort of war-king; a product of the great European war. His brother had been trained to be a king and had rewho had been trained for kingship, should also leave. And so this younger son, untrained in statecraft, crown and become a monarch. He had expected to follow the career of a soldier, and had been to school in England and at the royal military hool, Potsdam.

The event was chiefly notable, how-The event was chiefly notable, how-ever, in being a sort of transition from royalty to democracy—another result of the European war. While this young man was king, yet the oath he was just taking was to rule as a con-stitutional monarch, and his appear-ance in parliament here today, with the Prime Minister and Ministers about him, was a formal recognition of the principle for which this minis-
